ACTION-PACKED ADVENTURES OF RENOWNED ARTIST SPARK NEW BIOGRAPHY BY AWARD-WINNING CHILDREN'S AUTHOR

In his quest to paint the Indian tribes of North and South America, the artist and adventurer George Catlin braved burning deserts, uncharted prairies, and high mountain passes from icy Alaska to the Amazon jungle. His "Indian Gallery" of art and artifacts created a sensation from New York to Paris, yet this real-life Indiana Jones of the 19th-century art world died penniless and nearly forgotten. In Painting the Wild Frontier: The Art and Adventures of George Catlin (Clarion, July), award-winning children's book author Susanna Reich presents a lavishly-illustrated and action-packed adventure story of a great American artist--one whose "Indian Gallery" is now considered a crown jewel of the Smithsonian Institution.

With his taste for adventure, his optimism and self-reliance, and his entrepreneurial spirit, George Catlin embodied many of the qualities that defined the young American nation. A talented, driven man with a love of the wilderness and a gift for making friends, he crossed paths with many of the leading figures of his day, from Daniel Webster to P.T. Barnum. His story gives young readers a fresh, exciting take on American history and prompts thought-provoking questions about race relations, the treatment of Native Americans, and the settlement of the West.

Catlin's iconic paintings of the 1830's were the first images of Plains Indians that most whites had ever seen, and his books, lectures, and exhibits helped shape the world's understanding of the indigenous peoples of the American West. Long before Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show, he even produced live performances by Indian troupes that were the talk of the town. But after a series of tragic setbacks, Catlin went bankrupt and lost both his family and his life's work. Unbowed, he embarked on a second round of adventures with paintbrush in hand, traveling the length and breadth of South America and northward to the Bering Straits. At the end of his life he returned to the United States and lived out his last days painting in a tower of the Smithsonian "Castle" in Washington, D.C.
